

What sound does a space chicken make?

DIGITAL HUMANITY

Using digital spaces and tools to enhance human connection, creativity, collaboration, and construction

“I want the moon to move!” - Jackson

A photograph of two young children, a boy and a girl, sitting at a small black table in a room with large white projection screens. The boy, wearing a blue and white striped shirt, is leaning over the table, touching a large, textured, brown object. The girl, wearing a pink shirt, is sitting behind him, looking at the projection. The projection screens show colorful, abstract patterns, including a large green and pink shape and a blue butterfly. The room has a grey carpet and a brown wall. The text "CHARLIE: I'M GOING TO PRETEND THAT THE BUTTERFLY GOT A BUG BITE." is overlaid at the bottom of the image.

CHARLIE: I'M GOING TO PRETEND THAT THE BUTTERFLY GOT A BUG BITE.

The background of the slide is an abstract composition of broad, expressive brushstrokes. The primary color is a vibrant blue, which covers most of the frame. Overlaid on this are several strokes of a warm, orange-red color. These strokes are of varying lengths and directions, creating a sense of movement and depth. Some strokes are thick and saturated, while others are thinner and more translucent, allowing the blue to show through. The overall effect is a dynamic, painterly texture that serves as a backdrop for the text.

“Learning is less about acquiring or transmitting information or existing ideas or values than it is about collectively designing a world that is worth living in.”

Edith Ackermann
Psychologist

YOUTUBE.COM

Choose a story and imagine it in a different setting

I am wondering what it would look like if Goldilocks and the three...

YOUTUBE.COM

What happens when we all use the same characters to write stories.

YOUTUBE.COM

Story prompts using cards from a board game.

YOUTUBE.COM

Design your own characters for a story

